De Blasio proceeds with his 'progressive vision'

Transition. The city's mayor-elect outlines what's to come after a landslide victory Tuesday.

Fresh off Tuesday's victory, Mayor-Elect Bill de Blasio began defining his next steps on the road to City Hall Wednesday, naming transition leadership he said shares a "progressive vision" for New York.

"Today is now the first day of an eight-week sprint preparing our new administration. That is officially 55 days, and we are hitting the ground running," de Blasio said at a news conference.

The two co-chairs of the transition team, Jennifer Jones Austin and Carl Weisbrod, are former appointees of Mayor Michael Bloomberg, respectively working for the Administration for Children's Services and New York City Economic Development Corporation.

"The combination of perspectives and talents they bring aligns very closely to the agenda we put forward in the campaign," de Blasio said.

They are also seasoned players in city government, indicating a possible preference de Blasio will show in staffing his administration.

Transition team

De Blasio named Jennifer Jones Austin and Carl Weisbrod as co-chairs of the transition.

- Austin has headed the Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies and was a deputy commissioner of the Administration for Children's Services.

- Weisbrod was the founding president of the New York City Economic Development Corporation and the Alliance for Downtown New York.

"Having worked in New York City as long as I have, I'm gonna take a very hands-on approach."

De Blasio

I have, I'm gonna take a very hands-on approach," de Blasio said.

The appointees are "committed" to his vision for the city and represent its diversity.

"One of our greatest strengths is our diversity and it's crucial that our government represent that," the mayor-elect said.

De Blasio said that he has yet to determine a schedule in selecting the next police commissioner and schools chancellor. A full transition office will be operational by Nov. 12, he said.

De Blasio said that voters had spoken and that it will be his office's obligation to create a safe city where "prosperity is shared and there's opportunity for all."

Of course, de Blasio acknowledged the first days of his administration could be a bit bumpy.

"None of us is going to promise perfection any day soon," he said.

As for the next few days, de Blasio is headed to Puerto Rico today to attend a conference of Hispanic legislators. He will then take a brief vacation with his wife Chirlane McCray for "down time."

"We've heard about this thing, we don't know what it looks like," he joked.

Ballot. Voter turnout was historically low Tuesday in New York

Turnout in the general election for New York City mayor may have set a record low of only 22.26 percent of registered voters, according to preliminary figures from the Board of Elections.

Just over a million of 4.3 million registered voters in the city cast their ballot in the mayor's race, not including outstanding ballots. Since 1950, the highest turnout for a mayoral election was 1953, when 93 percent of voters voted, according to BOE records. The previous low in a city mayoral election was four years ago, when some 29 percent of registered voters cast their ballot. ANNA SANDERS

Woman put in choke hold, robbed in Brooklyn

A woman walking down a Brooklyn street last Friday was put in a choke hold and robbed by two men, police said.

The victim, 38, was walking in front of 782 Myrtle Ave. in Bed-Stuy at 7 a.m. when the suspects approached her from behind, put her in a choke hold and took her bag that contained a computer, cell phone and wallet.

The victim declined medical attention.

Mayor-Elect de Blasio meets with Bloomberg

Sit-down. The pair had a "productive" meeting at City Hall, he said.

Hours after his landslide victory, Mayor-Elect Bill de Blasio met with the current hizzoner at City Hall Wednesday morning.

"It was a cordial conversation, a very helpful conversation, very collegial," de Blasio said after the hour-long sit-down with Mayor Michael Bloomberg.

"He laid out some of the issues facing the city in the near-term that we needed to coordinate on," the mayor-elect said. "He talked about some of the ways he had put together his transition process, which was very helpful."

De Blasio said the mayor and his staff offered their help and support.

Maid cafe offers more than coffee

Latest trend. The cafe provides an experience where waitresses treat their customers as if they were serving their masters or mistresses.

When you walk in, young women in pink and white frilly maid uniforms bow and say, "Welcome home, Master!" in Japanese. This phrase sets the tone at Maid Cafe NY on Centre Street in Chinatown.

Maid Cafe NY is the first of its kind in New York. Maid cafes are popular in Japan, where they have been around since the early 2000s. Waitresses costume-play as cutesy maids in pinafores and petticoats, and refer to their customers as "Master" or "Princess."

Out of 16 customers, 15 were men. One of them asked his friends, "Can you imagine what every married couple would be like if the husband were the master?"

are interested in kawaii (cute) culture from Japan," he said.

The cafe hosts various costume-play and anime events, as well as monthly Maid Shows where maids dance and sing for customers.

Stop-and-frisk appeal a 'total' waste

Energized by the landslide victory of their mayoral candidate in yesterday's election, stop-and-frisk opponents came to City Hall on Wednesday to call on the outgoing mayor to drop his appeal.

Mayor Michael Bloomberg's law department is appealing federal Judge Shira Scheindlin's ruling against the way the NYPD practices stop, question and frisk. But the mayor-elect, Bill de Blasio, has vowed to drop the appeal.

The NYPD / GETTY IMAGES

"It's not as if it's up to the current mayor what happens beyond January. ... Might as well cooperate with the incoming administration, figure out how best to drop it and coordinate."

Congressman Jerrold Nadler

Congressman Jerrold Nadler called pursuing the appeal a "total" waste of taxpayer money.

"The appeal ... is going to be dropped in January," Nadler said. "So why waste everybody's time and money and energy in November and December?"

The police unions have all put forth petitions to establish themselves as injured parties, which would allow them to continue to carry the appeal if the city drops it. DANIELLE TCHOLAKIAN

Lead author of Obamacare critical of administration over the rollout

Fix. The White House is working with the help of tech advisers to resolve the website problems.

A senior Democratic senator who served as a lead author of President Barack Obama's health care law criticized the administration on Wednesday for failing to alert lawmakers to problems that led to the program's troubled rollout.

Sen. Max Baucus, chairman of the U.S. Senate Finance Committee, who worried openly in April that the rollout could become "a train wreck" said he has been disappointed to hear administration officials say they didn't see problems with the federal health care website HealthCare.gov.

Top US insurer expects enrollment extension

One of the largest health insurers on the Obamacare online marketplaces said it expects the government to extend enrollment for new cov-

The comments from Humana Inc add to calls from lawmakers to wait until it is clear people can sign up for coverage under President Barack Obama's health care law.

gov coming.

"When we asked for updates on the marketplaces, the responses we got were totally unsatisfactory. We heard multiple times that everything was on track. We now know that was not the case," he told U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius at an oversight hearing.

But Baucus also sounded a conciliatory note, saying he wanted to avoid assigning blame.

Under the 2010 Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, also known as Obamacare, it is mandatory for everyone to have health insurance or pay a fine.

Republicans oppose the plan on the grounds that it is an unwarranted expansion of the federal government.

Interest in Obamacare rises despite website

Uninsured Americans are showing more interest in the coverage offered under President Barack Obama's health care law despite technical problems that have hindered enrollment through a government website, according to a Reuters/Ipsos poll.

The glitches have crippled HealthCare.gov, frustrating millions of would-be applicants since it opened for enrollment on Oct. 1.

The poll's findings are good news for Obamacare supporters who worry the problems and bad press could dissuade people from signing up, particularly the young and healthy who are crucial to diversifying the pool of the insured and keeping premiums down. REUTERS

IPO. Consumer Web companies could benefit from Twitter

Twitter Inc. (TWTR) has the potential to pry open the door for consumer-Internet initial public offerings after it slammed shut following Facebook Inc.'s troubled share sale last year.

Zulily Inc., an online seller of apparel for moms and babies, and digital-education service Chegg Inc. are set to debut next week. Care.com Inc., owner of a site used to find babysitters, plans to hold an IPO early next year, people familiar with the matter said in August.

Consumer companies are lining up to tap the public markets now that the taint of Facebook's offering, which was marred by a computer malfunction and followed by a slump in the stock, has faded. In the 18 months since Facebook's IPO, only three U.S. consumer-Web companies have held

Texas voters think cost for stadium too astronomical

An effort to save the once-majestic Astrodome stadium in Houston failed on Tuesday night when voters rejected a $217 million bond proposal to turn it into a convention center and complex. The vote means likely demolition for the Astrodome, which was called the "Eighth Wonder of the World" after it opened as the world's first domed and air-conditioned stadium in 1965. Harris County voters rejected the bond proposal with a 53 percent to 47 percent vote. Proposition 2 would have allowed the county to issue up to $217 million in bonds to redesign and rejuvenate the once-celebrated stadium into a 350,000-square-foot facility with a 400,000-square-foot plaza. The aging facility has not hosted a sports team in nearly 15 years. REUTERS / GETTY IMAGES

Chemistry Casanova Reinvents the Emerald

San Francisco CA....It is 1937. You never saw a genius more in love. She loved him back, but how could he surprise her and stun her without breaking the bank? He knew she loved that glittering green necklace in the jewelry store window. But he also knew that he could never afford a natural emerald on a chemist's salary. So he made his own.

A few years later, he brought 100 carats along on his honeymoon in New York City. But when the couple visited a Fifth Avenue jeweler for a professional opinion, the manager called the cops. He assumed the gems were stolen because they looked too good to be true. His beautiful wife just smiled knowingly.

Own a piece of emerald history. We have spent the last few years refining this complex process and the results are stunning. The spectacular lab-created stone at the heart of our Scienza® Marquesa Created Emerald Pendant is a vivid $\frac{3}{4}$ carat marquise-cut green beauty cradled in gleaming .925 sterling silver and surrounded by the fire of our exclusive Diamond Aura® rounds.

Perfect from the start. Mined emeralds are born in chaos. As a result, they are littered with flaws, inclusions and cracks. Scienza emeralds are absolutely free of natural imperfections. Even the finest South American stones are treated and filled to keep them from splitting. But every Scienza emerald begins and ends in perfection.

The process begins with the seed of a natural emerald. In strictly controlled conditions, using intense heat of over 1800 degrees celsius, that seed takes over seven months to grow into a larger rough emerald. Chemically, the scientific stones grown in a lab are identical to mined emerald. They are just as hard and an incredibly rich, intense green.

Our expert appraiser has valued this pendant at $345 but since our chemist appreciates hard gems as well as hard earned cash, we are pricing this emerald pendant for the astoundingly low price of $39. That's 89% LESS!

A much greener emerald. Our Scienza Marquesa Created Emerald Pendant originates from the mind not the mines. The win-win result is an indulgent adornment that's literally and figuratively green—flashing more color, clarity, and fire than mined emeralds but without the environmental damage associated with gem mining.

Your satisfaction is guaranteed. Bring it home and see for yourself. If the brilliance of our Scienza Emerald fails to impress, simply send it back within 30 days for a full refund of your purchase price. But after wearing the world's smartest gem, you will see first-hand how beauty and brains come together.

Poison. Yasser Arafat was murdered with polonium: Widow

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat was poisoned to death in 2004 with radioactive polonium, his widow Suha said on Wednesday after receiving the results of Swiss forensic tests on her husband's corpse.

"We are revealing a real crime, a political assassination," she told Reuters.

A team of experts, including from Lausanne University Hospital's Institute of Radiation Physics, opened Arafat's grave in the West Bank city of Ramallah last November, and took samples from his body to seek evidence of alleged poisoning.

"This has confirmed all our doubts," said Suha Arafat after the Swiss forensic team handed over its report to her lawyers and Palestinian officials in Geneva. REUTERS

US looking for 'first step' from Iran in nuke talks

The United States wants Iran to agree in negotiations this week to a "first step" that stops its nuclear program from advancing further and starts reversing parts of it, a senior administration official said on Wednesday.

In return for such a move, Washington would be willing to offer Iran "very limited, temporary, reversible sanctions relief," the official said, giving no detail on what those measures might be.

The Election's Over ... What's Next?

New Yorkers Weigh in on Top Priorities for the New Mayor

Now that the election is over and New Yorkers have chosen new city leaders, our attention turns to governing. How can the new mayor create good-paying jobs, address high unemployment in low-income communities, and spur the development of affordable housing? The Community Service Society's annual Unheard Third survey offers a roadmap to specific proposals that New Yorkers broadly support—and are willing to invest in.

Our 2013 survey asked New Yorkers—of all income levels—for their opinions on pressing issues confronting the next mayor. We found widespread concern about income inequality and a fading belief that those struggling at the lower end of the city's economic ladder can move up to the middle class.

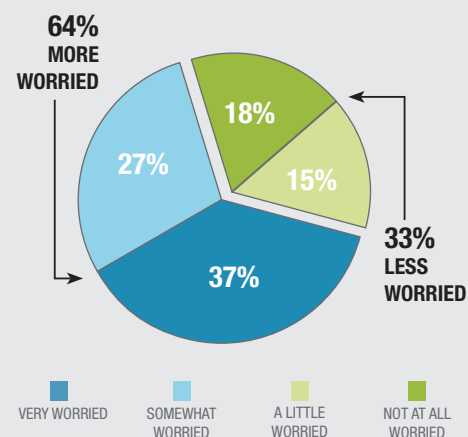

We found widespread concern about income inequality and a fading belief that those struggling at the lower end of the city's economic ladder can move up to the middle class.

We also found widespread agreement about several proposals to widen opportunities for New Yorkers while promoting upward mobility and expanding middle class prosperity. This emerging consensus points the way toward a set of concrete policy measures the next mayor can and should pursue to make economic advancement a centerpiece of his agenda.

Much has been made of the tough fiscal decisions awaiting the next mayor. It's important to note that many of the proposals cited here are budget neutral. Moreover, at a time when the city's poverty rate remains high at 21 percent, New Yorkers express a willingness to personally pay a little more in taxes and take on more debt to advance the economic prospects of those left behind.

Finding: New Yorkers are worried about widening inequality.

Q: How worried are you about widening inequality between the wealthy and the poor in New York City?

A New Consensus

EDUCATION

A wide majority of New Yorkers—two-thirds—prefer a change in the current administration's education policy

74% would be somewhat or very willing to personally pay more in taxes to make pre-K programs available to all children

70% favor investing in schools serving poor neighborhoods over the current administration's market approach

73% would be somewhat or very willing to personally pay more in taxes to expand career and technical education programs to prepare students for jobs in emerging industries

JOB CREATION

New Yorkers support broad measures to grow middle-income jobs and expand employment opportunities to underserved populations

73% support expanding paid sick leave to more workers

82% support investing in large public works to create good local jobs modernizing our infrastructure

73% would be somewhat or very willing to personally pay more in taxes to invest in jobs and training programs to help the city's 186,000 disconnected youth enter the labor market

70% support tax breaks and rezoning for businesses only if they are tied to local hiring, better wages, and adding affordable housing

HOUSING

Nearly 7 out of 10 New Yorkers want to scale up measures to reduce poverty and homelessness

66% would be somewhat or very willing to personally pay more in taxes to develop affordable low-income housing

The Community Service Society of New York (CSS) draws on a 170-year history of excellence in addressing the root causes of economic disparity through research, advocacy, litigation, and innovative program models that strengthen and benefit all New Yorkers. www.cssny.org

CSS conducts an annual survey, The Unheard Third, to better understand the views and experiences of low-income New Yorkers. We use the insights gleaned from our survey to advocate on behalf of our constituents and elevate their concerns in the public policy debate.

'Call of Duty: Ghosts' passes $1B in sales to retailers

Activision Blizzard Inc.'s latest title from its blockbuster "Call of Duty" video game franchise surpassed $1 billion in sell-in sales — the number of copies shipped to retailers — a day after its launch, the company said Wednesday.

Activision shares were relatively unchanged at $16.63 in early afternoon trade on the Nasdaq.

The franchise's 10th installment was released worldwide on Tuesday. REUTERS

Designers: Robot grocer controls its urge to kill Automated.

They're confident robots will be in homes within years, but say movies create "perception problem."

Autonomous robots are hard at work in factories around the world, but their plunge into the human environment has been delayed by safety fears. Researchers at Cornell University, have devised a learning experience that helps robots to operate safely around us by understanding that we are unpredictable and vulnerable to knives. Roboticist Ashesh Jain is optimistic.

How are you educating them?

In teaching the robot there are several feedback mechanisms. You can stop it in a task and correct its movement, and it will slowly improve them. It also learns to rank trajectories and give you a choice. The robot also learns to generalize properties, so in one lesson equips it for several similar tasks. It's designed to be used by non-experts.

During the research, were you scared of being stabbed?

No. Robots have no intelligence on what to do with knives but if they are working around us they need to understand, and they can. Also, the same training can be done with a wooden stick in the simulator.

Is this the major issue that has kept them out of our houses?

They are in assembly lines right now but they won't be accepted in homes if they can't understand our preferences. There are more technical issues to address, but we are improving these day by day.

How close are these to working in supermarkets?

The goal of robotics is not to replace humans, just to relieve them of mundane tasks. Robots can do the checking out in stores while cashiers help customers. I think this robot can be in human vicinities within four to five years and in households within seven to eight years.

They'll be back

How much has your field suffered because of movies like 'Terminator'?

These movies are exaggerations and real robotics is about saving lives. But that perception is a barrier and we hope it can change. We are working hard to send robots into houses to change that perception.

DOUGLAS COUPLAND

Douglas Coupland is a Canadian writer, artist and designer. His first novel was 1991's "Generation X: Tales for an Accelerated Culture." His novella, "Temp," of which this is the first installment, will be running online and in the pages of your daily Metro each weekday through Nov. 29.

Day 4: Temp's lack of jeans day spirit irks co-workers

I walked into the office the next morning only to experience that sickening pang we all dread: jeans day — enforced perkiness among the girls, while the guys make theatrical, creepy, ass-gazing gropey faces in the lunchroom. No jeans for me.

My jacket wasn't even off when Sarah No. 3 stuffed a wad of documents covered with sticky notes into my hand. "I need these alphabetized like we did last week."

"Fine."

She stared at me.

"Is there a problem?" I asked.

"You know, it wouldn't have been so hard to throw on some jeans today."

"I'm not a very jeans-y person."

"Morale is really down around here and we need some fun."

"OK ..."

"It's not even for us, Shannon. It's for the kids."

I gagged and then the phone rang: "Good morning. Taylor, Wagner & Kimura Filter Systems, a proud patriotic company since 1899. One moment, I'll connect you." Then the Danimal rolled up to the desk, winking like mad. "How was last night's, um ... date?"

"Date? It wasn't a date. It was Mister McFunbury's for exactly 120 minutes."

"And what was Mr. Xu like?"

I wanted to keep my secret. "Nice enough. Limited English though."

"Did he say anything about the company I should know about?"

Boy did he ever! "No. Mostly we just stared at the 'How I Met Your Mother' reruns playing on the screen above the salad bar." A total lie.

"I don't think he's very espionage-y."

"Oh." Danimal seemed let down.

Just then Kyle walked in with a delivery.

"Hot and heavy at McFunbury's last night, huh?"

I was peeved. "What the f—? It's none of your business, Kyle. And who told you?"

"I was driving back from the oil refinery. Saw you there with your date. Senior's Night too — rocking!"

"The refinery? Why were you there?"

"I'm applying for a job."

"Oh." Kyle was acting as if he and I are somehow a real couple. At the same time, there I was getting surprisingly verklempt thinking of no more Kyle, with him working at that big gross refinery for the rest of his life.

Kyle said, "I'm sick of being a temp on wheels, and it's occurring to me that I'll never even be middle class let alone some big success story, and maybe I need to get my foot in the door at a place that is never going to go out of business — hence oil."

The phone rang; it was Xu. "Gotta take this, guys." I picked it up. "Good morning. Taylor, Wagner & Kimura Filter Systems, a proud patriotic company since 1899."

Kyle and the Danimal lumbered off.

I lowered my voice into the receiver. "Hey, Shoeboy. How you doing?"

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Dana Delany might have a stalker and Niall Horan is having trouble adjusting.

@NiallOfficial: I'm havin the weirdest few days with this jetlag! Weird stuff keeps happening to me!

Margot Robbie: There are worse-looking people to partner up with in a photo booth. / FRAZER HARRISON, GETTY IMAGES

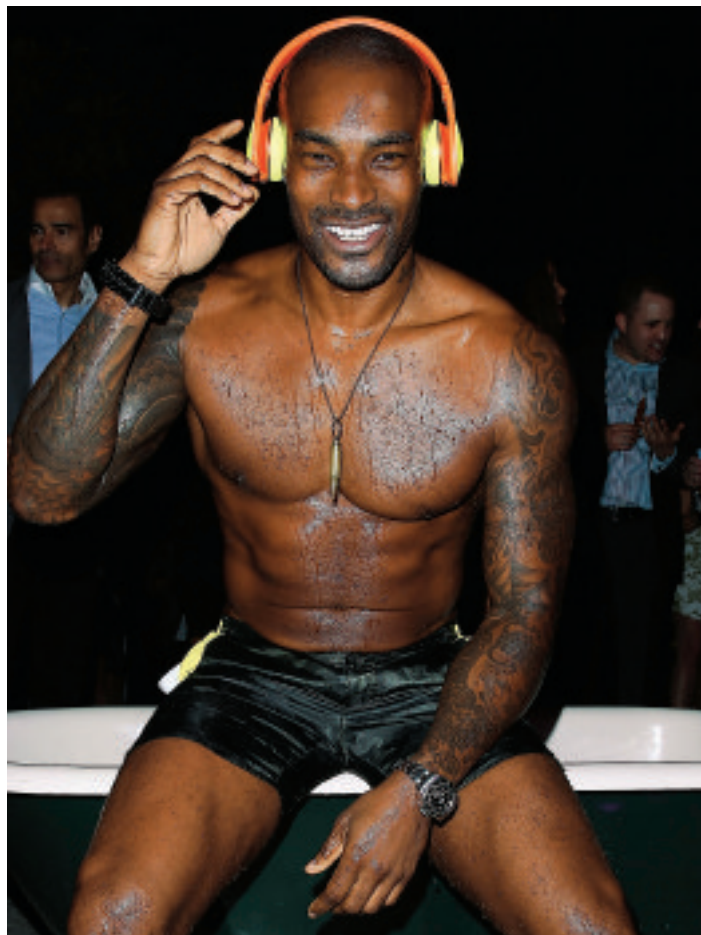

Is Smith gettin' jiggy with Robbie?

Will Smith reportedly had a steamy romp in a photo booth at a party with "Focus" co-star Margot Robbie, which may spell trouble for his allegedly shaky marriage to Jada Pinkett Smith, according to Star magazine.

At the pre-Halloween bash in New Orleans, sources say Smith and Robbie slipped into the photo booth to pose for some snaps commemorating the night. "Once they pulled the curtain back to take the pictures, they let their inhibitions run wild, laughing, hugging and nuzzling each other in the dark," the source says. "He wasn't acting like a married man." They didn't stick around to collect the photos and Smith's assistant snapped them up once they were printed. "After they left the party, they were gone all night," the source says.

Jada and Will Smith haven't appeared in public together since August. Is it bad that I'm OK with them breaking up? They made it 15 years — that is several lifetimes for a union in Hollywood. What more do we want from them?

Celebrity women of a certain stature get paid a lot of money to wear next to nothing at promotional events (see Heidi Montag, JWoww). God bless Tyson Beckford, who shows us that two can play at that game. The model took it all off at the Monster Headphones Launch Party in Sydney, Australia, on Wednesday. And was probably paid a pretty penny to do so.

Grande sees demons kind of a lot

Sometimes you read an interview with a cute, squeaky-clean, on-top-of-the-world pop star who has not fallen prey to the trappings of the industry and you think, "Maybe this kid will do OK." But sometimes you see a glimpse of a darker future.

On an unrelated note, Ariana Grande sees demons sometimes. The up-and-coming pop star was in Kansas City for a show recently: "The next night we wanted to go to Stull Cemetery, which is known as one of the seven gates to hell on Earth," she told Complex. "I felt this sick, overwhelming feeling of negativity over the whole car and we smelled sulfur, which is the sign of a demon, and there was a fly in the car randomly, which is another sign of a demon. ... I took a picture and there are three super distinct faces in the picture — they're faces of textbook demons."

THE WORD

@dorothyatmetro
dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Grande says that wasn't her only demonic experience — she also saw a cloud of black matter next to her bed, and says it made her hear whispers when she tried to go to sleep.

Get some rest, Ariana. Call your mom. Next time you see a demon, take a day off. You seem like a sweet girl. MELINDA TAUB

2 'The Book Thief' The latest best-seller that will make for a hard sell to audiences is Markus Zusak's tome about an orphan (Sophie Nelisse) living in Nazi Germany. Geoffrey Rush and Emily Watson play her foster parents.

3 'Great Expectations' Previously adapted for the big screen as a '90s Ethan Hawke mope-a-thon (albeit a pretty one, by "Gravity" director Alfonso Cuarón), Charles Dickens' novel gets a more traditional, period-specific take, with Helena Bonham Carter as Miss Havisham and Ralph Fiennes as Magwitch.

1 'Thor: The Dark World' Now that he has that "Avengers" business taken care of, Chris Hemsworth's alpha-male god tries to reconnect with his former flame (Natalie Portman), all while fighting off a batch of genocidal elves. Remember when no one but geeks got excited for this stuff?

4 'The Armstrong Lie' Last seen tackling WikiLeaks with "We Steal Secrets," absurdly prolific documentarian Alex Gibney takes on Lance Armstrong and his long history of denying he dopes before races.

5 'How I Live Now' The ubiquitous Saoirse Ronan headlines this grim what-if, playing a teen who arrives in the English countryside just in time for the U.K. to turn into a violent military state.

6 'At Berkeley' Documentarian Frederick Wiseman is 83 years old and still averages one documentary a year. As always, his cameras hang back to watch an institution at work, in this case a college with a long history of student protests.

7 'Go for Sisters' It's been a while since John Sayles ("Lone Star") made a film many people paid attention to. Hopefully someone will check out his quite good latest: a character-driven mystery starring Lisa Gay Hamilton, Edward James Olmos and Yolanda Ross.

8 'The Motel Life' Emile Hirsch and Stephen Dorff play brothers who go on the road after being involved in a hit-and-run that proved fatal.

9 'Ender's Game' Sci-fi legend Orson Scott Card may be a massive homophobe, but he's a talented massive homophobe, whose most famous book — about a boy (Asa Butterfield) being trained for war — is the latest would-be space spectacular.

8 P.M., CNBC
ALEXANDRA CAVALLO

Since playing an unwittingly mischievous young girl in "Atonement," the Irish actress Saoirse Ronan has steadily stayed in view. In addition to "The Lovely Bones" and "Hanna," she's had five films this year alone, including "The Host" and "How I Live Now," the latter in which she plays a bratty teen visiting England just in time for war to break out. And incidentally, her name is pronounced "SEER-shuh."

Your character is very angry and weary for an adaptation of a young adult book.

I loved the idea that she would curse and that she was angry and kind of modern — just a very current, abrasive kind of girl, very cold to people and not very likable at first. I hadn't done that in a while. I had played a few characters that were ethereal and part of a supernatural world. When I finished "The Host," I was like, "I need a script where I'm just playing a girl I would run into on the street."

SAOIRSE RONAN

The star of "How I Live Now" just wanted to play a typical, modern teen.

COMING OF AGE

How much did you fall back on Meg Rosoff's source, especially considering adaptations often alter the source?
That was actually the reason I didn't read the book. The characters were changed. All of our ages were slightly altered. Usually I don't read the book. I'm hoping to play Mary, Queen of Scots next year, and for something like that I would do the opposite and read as much as I could.

Your parents used to be pretty involved in the projects you picked. How hands-on are they now?

My parents weren't my agents or anything like that. They weren't my managers. They were my mom and dad. My mom would always come away with me when I was working, and my dad's an actor as well. It was basically the case when I was sent the script, we'd all read it so we could talk about it. It was a bit more relaxed.

Getting old

Are you eager to get out of teenage roles?

I think I'm getting there, yeah. I was lucky when I came into film. I never really played kiddie roles; I was always the child in an adult environment in adult films. It can be tricky when you're a teenager to find a really good character to play, but there are a few out there. When you enter your early 20s, there's just an abundance of great characters to play.

That said, some actors play teens into their early 30s.

They do, yeah. [Laughs] I don't think I want to do that though. I want to get to the stage where I'm playing an old biddy and I'm making a cup of tea, and that's all I have to worry about. That's the dream.

Pros and cons of types of lube

Water-based (K-Y Jelly, Astroglide, Maximus)

Pro: These won't strain your sheets and you won't be greasy for the rest of your life because they absorb into your skin.

Con: Because they will absorb into your skin, you may have to reapply.

Silicone-based (Wet Platinum, Trojan)

Pro: These will last much longer than water-based lubes, so you won't have to reapply. They can also be used in water.

Con: They can be messier, difficult to get off your body and may leave a mark on your sheets.

Oil-based (baby oil, Vaseline, Man Cream)

Pro: None. Not recommended except for guys who want to have a lube for masturbation.

Con: They cannot be used with condoms.

If you get a lube stain on your sheets, try using an extra-strength detergent or a dish soap designed to dissolve grease.

Thinking of lube as a pleasure-enhancer (and not a buzzkill) can be a self-fulfilling prophecy. / GETTY IMAGES, ISTOCKPHOTO

Although it's a sexual accoutrement, there's just something about lube that's pretty unsexy. So to break down our stigmas and get to the heart of our lube concerns, I sat down with sexologist and author Logan Leffkoff, Ph.D., to get her advice on the slippery stuff.

No one wants to be the one who busts out the lube during a sexual encounter. Why do you think people are sketched out about it?

In the past, lubes have been seen as a problem-solving tool instead of a pleasure enhancing one — but those days are long gone. Research from Indiana University shows that 82 percent of users believe lubricant enhances sexual pleasure.

Should we just get over ourselves and try using lube already?

Yes! Because sex feels great with lube. It helps makes sex smooth and makes the connection between partners feel even more intimate and comfortable. And it can speed up foreplay and the time to orgasm too. Nearly half of users agree lubricant makes it easier to have an orgasm.

How can someone feel more suave using it?

It should add to sex, not be a distraction. It's all in the application. You don't have to wave it around and make a big deal about it. Put some on your fingers and massage it in wherever you want to stimulate.

What type of lube should people get?

Trojan's Arouses & Intensifies lubricant is flexible for use during foreplay and intercourse. / COURTESY OF TROJAN

The right lube depends upon what you're looking to do — seriously. Different types of sex require different types of lubrication. Do you want it to add to sex by providing additional sensation? Then one that warms or tingles might be a good idea. Are you planning on having a long marathon bout of sex where your lube is going to need to last? If so, you may want to try a silicon-based lubricant. Finally — and this is really important — don't use oils or anything oil-based if you're using a latex condom.

How to be positively app-y in bed

Sex ed. Learn more without revisiting analogies to birds and bees.

The next time you have a burning question about, um, something burning down there, or perhaps a last-minute birth control conundrum, the University of Oregon's Health Center has provided a high-tech solution.

SexPositive, its new free app, first asks users to agree to "express and obtain explicit consent from everyone involved before engaging in a sexual act." Then the app notifies users that it won't share or use personal information — then it's game time.

Two spinning wheels appear with a fill-in-the-blank and various body parts and nouns. The wheel will stop on its own or a user can manually stop it based on two word combinations. Then, users can learn more by tapping "STI risks," "Safer Sex Practices" and "Communication & Advice."

"This looks like so much fun, people will learn in spite of themselves," says Carol Queen, University of Oregon alumna and founding director of the Center for Sex and Culture. Her San Francisco-based center provides education and resources to people across the sexual and gender spectrum. "[It's] all the sex ed and none of the uncomfortable coach from your high school," she quips.

Squeamishness aside, the app provides additional resources. For instance, links are included for more information from the Centers for Disease Control.

- Can I trust this person?
- How well do I know this person?
- What do friends, family, society and religion tell me about sex? Do I

- What are my insecurities?
- Do I have any regrets about past sexual experiences?

"[It's] all the sex ed and none of the uncomfortable coach from your high school."

Carol Queen, Founding director of the Center for Sex and Culture

Considering the university paid $24,000 to bring sex columnist Dan Savage to campus and educate students about health and sexuality, promotion of the new app is a priority. Savage has called it "an amazing, fun and completely addictive sex ed app."

Queen also points out its non-judgmental nature: "Sex-positivity is the idea that we don't judge others for their sexual desires and activities as long as they're consensual. That includes decisions not to have sex. In a perfect world, everyone would have the information and support they need for a healthy sex life, and of course that isn't [true] now, but thinking sex-positively may help us get there."

1 oz. fresh lime juice
1/2 oz. lychee juice
1 bar spoon yuzu marmalade

INSTRUCTIONS:

Shake, strain into a martini glass and garnish with a shiso leaf.

Trend spotting: Herb cocktails

Drinks. Ingredients are going from the garden to your glass.

If you get out as much as we do, first of all no judgment and second: You may have noticed that fresh herbs are cropping up as ingredients and garnishes on cocktail menus throughout the city. What brings about this wave of greenery in our drinks, and how does it enhance spirit flavors?

We spoke with mixologist Jen Gordon, who designs cocktails for Altamarea Group's Ai Fiori (400 Fifth Ave., 212-613-8660) in collaboration with director of bar operations Eben Freeman. Here's what she has to tell us about this exciting trend.

Why are herbs in drinks making an appearance on cocktail menus?

Herbs are popping up in cocktails because, like in food, they add an element of freshness to drinks. They can be used in a variety of ways, from just shaking straight into a cocktail to infusing into syrups or the Jen Gordon knows that you might not want a fruity drink.

spirits themselves.

What kinds of drinks are best to support or balance an herb garnish?

This feels like a cop-out of an answer, but herbs are so versatile that they can go in any direction. Savory, sweet, classic, innovative, etc. However, if the goal is to highlight the flavor of the herb, simple is usually best. If you get too complex, it is easy to lose sight of the main ingredient.

What inspired the flavors in your cocktail (at right)?

All aspects of the Green Vespa are meant to scream fall. The base flavors are pear and sage. The color of the drink is balancing between green, yellow and burnt orange from the cayenne pepper. It is meant to be reminiscent of autumn leaves. That point is driven a little further by the garnish of a small sage leaf. It sits on top of the rock so that it is right in your nose when you take a sip. It's autumn in a glass.

Are fresh herbs necessary, and are they unusual for a bar to have on hand?

Fresh herbs are preferred, but it really depends on what flavor you want in the drink. Dried herbs are typically used when fresh aren't available, but in drying them, they can take on new flavor profiles of their own. In some cases, those subtle differences can benefit a drink. That said, I tend to lean toward fresh. Serious cocktail bars and restaurants always seem to have fresh herbs available. I am fortunate to work in a restaurant with a very well-stocked kitchen, so fresh herbs are always available to us. Unfortunately, your average dive-bar isn't going to be garnishing your gin and tonic with a basil floret — yet.

Cocktail of the Week

Green Vespa

Created by Jen Gordon, Ai Fiori

Ingredients:

1/2 oz. fresh lemon juice
1/2 oz. simple syrup
3/4 oz. pear puree
1 pinch cayenne pepper
2 large sage leaves, torn
1 1/2 oz. Grey Goose Poiré pear vodka

Instructions:

Combine all ingredients in a cobbler shaker. Shake and double strain into a chilled rocks glass over a large ice cube. Place a single small sage leaf in the center of the ice cube.

PROVIDED

Is this something our readers can do at home?

Absolutely! My favorite way to do it is through flavored simple syrups. Use 50/50 sugar to hot water, stirring until fully dissolved. While still hot, drop a bunch of whatever herb you have on hand — my favorites are thyme or lemon verbena. Let it steep for a couple of hours and you're ready.

Hot chef. April Bloomfield is coming to a TV near you.

April Bloomfield is one of only a handful of female chefs in the U.S. who has earned a coveted Michelin star, and she's done it not once but twice: for The Spotted Pig and The Breslin. She also oversees two other NYC eateries, The John Dory Oyster Bar and Salvation Taco. As if these aren't enough, this month she opened her first restaurant outside the city (Tosca, in San Francisco). The busy restaurateur is only getting busier: This Sunday begins Bloomfield's eight-episode arc on "The Mind of a Chef," a James Beard Award-winning public television series following chefs as they cook, travel and share their inspirations.

Why take on a TV show? I always wanted to do [TV] in a format that I really liked, and I'd been a fan of "Mind of a Chef" after watching their episodes with Dave Chang [of Momofukui]. I was pretty shocked when they said that they wanted me to be a part of it, but I immediately said yes.

How did you find the time to juggle the show and your restaurants? I think chefs juggle a lot in general. I think that's the nature of the job, whether they're juggling a TV show or juggling stuff they're cooking on the line. It is just one of those things that I fit within my day or a weekend. I had a great time doing it.

What not-so-glamorous parts of your job will viewers get to see? There's an episode called "Restaurateur," so I'm sure there's gonna be some ups and downs and emotional stuff there, especially with building out [Tosca]. I haven't seen those episodes, so I don't know what to expect, but I'm sure people will get a glimpse of me and what my passion is and why I do the things I do.

How would you sum up that mission statement? I think that's the whole point of the show: It's a great platform to see different chefs and how they use their minds or how they think about

Chef April Bloomfield will be featured in eight episodes of the award-winning PBS series "The Mind of a Chef," starting this Sunday, Nov. 10, at 4 p.m. on WNET Channel 13. / ZERO POINT ZERO

Passion

What do you hope viewers will take away from your episodes?

I hope my passion comes through. I hope my enthusiasm for finding great produce; I suppose my sincerity. [Cookbook author] Marcella Hazan was an inspiration; I'd read her books many times and I got to film with her, which I'm gonna remember for the rest of my life, and I hope that the sincerity of that comes through on TV. The dish that she introduced me to is the most delicious that I had ever eaten. To be able to work with her and just be in her presence and learn from her was amazing.

Deal

Celebrate this weekend

Bloomfield's restaurant, The John Dory Oyster Bar (1196 Broadway, 212-792-9000), is celebrating its third anniversary this Sunday with complimentary wine flights for dinner guests.

food. When [the production company] first asked me to do it, I was kind of taken aback that they chose me, because I was like, "Oh, I'm not Dave Chang or Sean Brock," and I think that's the whole point: Everybody's different.

Your places have always remained buzzworthy. How do you keep the quality consistent? It takes a lot of hard work running a restaurant and it takes even more hard work to run various restaurants. It's just a matter of trying to inspire and keep progressing — and tasting is really important and checking for consistency, motivating people to make delicious food and to make sure everything is tip-top and shipshape. If you want consistency in your restaurants you have to be present. [But] it's important to have other people in charge — I have some wonderful head chefs in each of my restaurants that have been working with me for many years, and they do a great job. If I didn't have them then I couldn't do what I do.

Learn beer and wine basics at these classes

School's in session. You'll sound like the most informed guest at your next dinner party.

From Chianti to cabernet sauvignon, Pilsners to porters, if you're looking to bone up on your boozy knowledge this fall, there are plenty of classes for doing so.

Brooklyn Winery (213 N. Eighth St., 347-763-1506) prides itself on offering a harvest season in the heart of NYC. Every Wednesday they do $35 tours, followed by a tasting of all 13 of their bottled wines (many of which are new). Visiting now means you can actually see the wine being made.

Harvest season is ending soon, and the space is celebrating with a Brooklyn-tinged French Beaujolais Nouveau party (with food, music, etc.) on Nov. 21. Get tickets at www.bkwinery.com.

Sommelier Michael Madrigale leads Saturday afternoon tastings of six to eight wines, paired with small plates, at Bar Boulud (1900 Broadway, 212-595-0303). This Saturday the restaurant's famous charcuterie is on the food lineup. The tasting, $65, starts at 3 p.m.

In September, Top Hops Beer Shop (94 Orchard St., 212-254-4677) began an education series for beer beginners and pros that's limited to 10 people per class. Learn about (and taste) Trappist beers on Nov. 18 and 19, and fruity beers on Dec. 2. Classes range from $50-$60 and take place from 6:30-8 p.m.

Laura Maniec opened Corkbuzz (13 E. 13th St., 646-873-6071) to much fanfare two years ago, and she keeps the love going by offering wine, beer and food classes on the regular. We're excited for Nov. 23's Thanksgiving pairings class — complete with turkey! Call to register for the $50 class.

Upcoming free seminars at Whiskey & Wine Off 69 (1321 Second Ave., 212-585-0005) include Thanksgiving drinks (with Dale DeGroff, aka King Cocktail) on Nov. 25 and punch for the holidays (with Jim Meehan of PDT) in December.

In Murray Hill, Terroir (439 Third Ave., 212-481-1920) has $27 classes that seat up to 12 students. On the upcoming agenda: Aperitifs and Digestifs (Saturday), The Underdogs of Burgundy (Nov. 16) and the Loire Valley Chenin Blanc and Cabernet Franc (Nov. 23).

And Barley & Grain (421 Amsterdam Ave., 646-360-3231) has whiskey and craft beer classes every Tuesday at 6 p.m., ranging from $25-$45.

Horoscope

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Attend events that will help you reconnect with your past. The opportunity to try something new or to give an old idea a face-lift will prove enlightening.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Slow down. Impulse will be the enemy, unless it is confined to your home. A false sense of security should be discouraged.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Step up and be counted. You will have the ability to make others listen and respond. You can wield power.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Don't wait until you are forced into a tricky situation. Make decisions that counter what others want you to do.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. State your position forthrightly and with candor. The less you leave untold, the better.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Control will be necessary. Instead of simply reacting, re-evaluate a situation and consider all the possible consequences as well as the pros and cons of a major decision.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Your thirst for knowledge will lead research that will help you with big projects. A supportive individual will point you right.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Make sure that you have the correct information. You are likely to be disillusioned regarding what someone is offering you.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Show everyone how much fun you can be today. Getting involved in activities that have a creative twist will allow you to show off your talents.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Don't leave room for complaints regarding your job performance. A different environment will be tempting.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. As long as you don't let someone play mind games, it will be easy for you to make decisions. Let your intuition guide you.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Work hard and finish everything that's expected of you. Don't let your productivity suffer because of what someone says or does. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Chandler injury has Knicks now searching for answers

NBA. The Knicks' center will be out for over a month at the start of a rough season so far.

For a Knicks team off to an ugly 1-3 start, the last thing they needed was an injury on top of it.

But the team got the bad news it dreaded Wednesday morning when Tyson Chandler learned he has a hairline fracture in his right leg and will be out four to six weeks. The injury is non-displaced and will not require surgery.

It will, however, require major changes to the Knicks lineup. Chandler, the 2011-12 NBA Defensive Player of the Year, is the key to the team's defense. He is also the only true center the team has on its roster.

Chandler injured his leg on a freak play where Bobcats guard Kemba Walker was fouled and he stumbled into Chandler's right leg at 5:25 in the first quarter. He did not return.

Chandler is averaging 7.3 points, 9.0 rebounds and 2.5 blocks per game this season.

career as Tyler. After committing to Louisville, he instead left high school early to sign with a pro team in Israel. He was a second-round pick in 2011 and played with Golden State and then Atlanta off and on. The problem is he's still recovering from offseason foot surgery.

2 Amar'e Stoudemire
A few years ago, Stoudemire would've slid to the pivot and been a capable replacement offensively and defensively. Three knee surgeries later, Stoudemire was booed heavily Tuesday night after 11 ineffective minutes with five turnovers.

4 Cole Aldrich
The former Kansas star might be the immediate answer for New York. The 6-foot-11 true center has yet to play this season, but he was specifically kept on the roster due to his position. He averaged 4.2 rebounds in 11.3 minutes per game in the preseason.

Runners back

Giants getting healthy at running back

The Giants are still without the services of running back David Wilson, who has yet to be cleared to resume football activities, but they finally got some good news regarding their backfield.

Andre Brown (leg) and Brandon Jacobs (hamstring) should both be ready to return from injury.

"We've got some big backs. It's good to get some guys back healthy. Peyton [Hillis] is a guy that hasn't been playing for the first six weeks of the year and he's coming out getting 25 touches a game, so it'll be good for him to get some relief. That bye came at the right time for him," Eli Manning said. "And it'll be good to have Brandon and

Brown was devastated after breaking his leg in the preseason, as he was expected to be the feature back. / GETTY IMAGES

Andre back in the mix. ... We should be very strong at the running back position now."

Brown may be the guy who eventually takes over the full workload, with Jacobs and Hillis being more of the short-yardage and spot-duty types. Brown, who was injured in the final preseason game and was placed on the designated to return/injured reserve list, will likely be activated by Saturday's deadline.

"Coach came up to me [and asked], 'Are you ready?'" Brown said. "I was like, 'Hell, yes!' I guess we'll find out this week what they're going to do with me, [but] my legs are feeling great. I don't feel any little aches or anything like that anymore. During warm-ups a couple weeks ago, it would still ache a little bit and now it's not even happening. I feel great."

FANTASY

ADAM LEVITAN, LIVING THE FANTASY

METRO'S FANTASY GURU BREAKS IT ALL DOWN.

MR. RODGERS' NIGHTMARE

Things could be worse for Aaron Rodgers owners. Your girlfriend could have left you or maybe you are going home to discover a sewage leak in your kitchen. But yeah, there's no sugarcoating it: Things are bad.

Giving up, however, is for the weak. You can still win fantasy glory.

Stop-gap solutions.

Option one is to hold Rodgers on the bench and wait for his broken collarbone to heal. Reports this week suggest the earliest he'll be back is Week 13 and the latest will be Week 16. Piecing together quarterback production for your team will be far easier than what the real-life Packers are dealing with.

You could go with Jake Locker against the Jags this week, Nick Foles vs. the Redskins in Week 11 and Jay Cutler against the Rams in Week 12. Before you know it, you might get Rodgers back. Use waivers and ride matchups. It's more practical at QB than anywhere else.

Rodgers in a hoodie against Chicago was a nightmare for fantasy owners. / GETTY IMAGES

Trade market. Let's say you can't afford to hold out and wait on Rodgers. Fine. There should be a big trade market for a guy who should be back for the fantasy playoffs. If

I have an 8-1 or 9-0 team, I'm doing everything I can to trade for this guy.

Rodgers owners can reasonably ask for a package of something like Russell Wilson and Rueben Randle or Terrelle Pryor and Shane Vereen. It's not ideal, but these are moves that could benefit both sides.

Attack, attack. For those of us who don't own Rodgers, this is why we've been grinding the wire all year. Many of us have two good quarterbacks, such as Matthew Stafford and Pryor or Andrew Luck and Ben Roethlisberger.

It's now time to use these assets to attack the Rodgers owner with trade offers. We can afford to get thinned out at quarterback — the most replaceable position — to obtain difference makers at wideout, running back and tight end.
